*Pictured here are students from the 2018 Asase Yaa Children's Summer
Art Camp performing the original production, "HBCU Show," created by our camp attendees.*

The "HBCU Show" was featured and presented seven times as part of the "Onstage Weeksville Theater Series," held at the Weeksville Heritage Center (February 13-16). The play was inspired by and in support of historically Black colleges and universities throughout the United States. The HBCU Show is an original story written by Asase Yaa's Executive Director, Kofi Osei Williams and is based on six adolescents from Brooklyn, NY, who have the privilege to experience a Historically Black College and University national tour.
